

MAKING ROOM FOR THE NEXT GENERATION CENTER FOR IRISH MUSIC'S EXPANSION & IMPROVEMENT PROJECT

Student enrollment has increased steadily over 18 years, augmented by successful online programs launched during the COVID pandemic. The Center for Irish Music needs space to grow, and we have a unique opportunity to expand our school within the very walls of our home at the Celtic Junction.

This leasehold improvement project⁺ will double our facility space, renovating it for increased efficiency to meet the growing demand for programs in Irish traditional music.

We invite you to join us on this journey with a tax-deductible capital contribution to support this transformative project!

"What's going on at the Center for Irish Music is extraordinary. As someone who comes from New York, we have nothing as organized as this, with wonderful teaching staff, the facilities that are here for children to learn, and the way they bring in world class teachers every year to create even more buzz. It's an incredible environment for learning and creativity."

- Joanie Madden, Grammy-winning Irish flute player
